

Molly Rudberg is an executive coach, people consultant and leadership expert with clients in the United States and Europe. She specializes in helping executives, teams and organizations identify and remove roadblocks to productivity. Her approach focuses on improving an organization's bottom line while strengthening the skills and relationships of its people.

In practice for the past 17 years, Molly works with a wide variety of clients in verticals such as e-commerce, marketing, hospitality, real estate, healthcare, and technology. She is a sought after "fixer" for VC and PE groups who need help with the leadership teams within their investment portfolios. In addition to co-authoring "From the Yoga Mat to the Corner Office" (a book about integrating proven mindfulness techniques into management practices), she has been an invited faculty member at Dominican University in Illinois.

Prior to the advent of the "Plague Year" of 2020, Molly was a frequent workshop leader and public speaker. Clients and audiences have described her work as "transformative", "captivating", and "wildly effective". Her goal is to continue to live up to the high standards of her corporate and individual clients.

Molly resides in Chicago with her husband, two children, and certifiably lunatic dog Rylie. She enjoys travel, her work with local non-profits focused on ending hunger and domestic violence, and spending time with her family.
